

TO: To deconstruct a piece of writing.

Wednesday 27th May 2020

Dear Diary,

Today has been a fantastic day. Aaron and I have spent the day close to home, but it has certainly been a lot of fun. Scout had a wonderful time too. We had lots of exciting plans, so we had to make sure that we were organised. I was so pleased the sun was shining.

We woke up really early, so we decided to head out on our long walk over the nearby fields. Scout was so excited that he pulled on his black lead the whole way. He dashed off as soon as he could, and waited for us to throw his bright tennis ball. The huge sun was already beaming in the clear, blue sky. We made sure we took fresh water, so we weren't thirsty. I felt really warm, but it was still cool enough to walk. Scout kept lying down because he was really hot too! I couldn't wait to get home or for the next part of the day.

We put our chairs out in our pretty garden, and we waited. I heard a loud knock at the door, and it was the exciting parcel I had been waiting for. It was a small, rainbow paddling pool! Scout loves water, so I knew he would enjoy this present. We spent the whole day playing and splashing in the paddling pool. I wonder who had the most fun?

We had a lovely day, and something even more exciting happened at the end. My younger sister moved into her first home, and she felt so lucky. She used FaceTime to show us around. It has large windows and a huge, beautiful garden. She also told us that they were getting a cute puppy next week, and she was travelling from Romania. What an exciting day! I can wait to meet their new puppy.

Success Criteria

Bronze

Capital Letters

Full Stops

Silver

Adjectives

Coordinating Conjunctions

(and, but, so, or)

Gold

Adventurous Vocabulary